

Call for submissions: Special Issue of Frontiers in Psychiatry on “Positive or Negative? The Effect of Emerging Technologies and Products on Mental Health”

Dear colleague,

The Frontiers in Psychiatry has launched an article collection (Special Issue) on "Positive or Negative? The Effect of Emerging Technologies and Products on Mental Health" and would like to invite submissions. Frontiers in Psychiatry is an open-access journal with an impact factor of 5.435.

The special issue will focus on showcasing whether the use of digital products affects mental health, how this can happen, and the differences in subpopulations including sex, age, ethnicity, region, and religion. In particular, in this research topic, we will pay attention to the interaction of traditional mental health issues and new technologies, to identify new avenues for intervention and novel mental health risks arising from the ubiquitous role of digital and electronic devices in modern social life.

We welcome Original Research, Systematic Reviews, Mini-Reviews, Reports, Perspectives, and Commentary articles that can contribute to expanding the knowledge pool in, but are not limited to, the following areas:

- The relationship between various emerging technologies and products and mental health
- How social media is associated with mental well-being in different cultural contexts
- How cyberbullying and game addiction affect mental health and what preventive measures can be taken
- What we can do to take advantage of digital devices and use them to make progress toward public mental health

Submissions

Submissions must be made online, by following the link on this page.

(see here: <https://www.frontiersin.org/research-topics/32232/positive-or-negative-the-effect-of-emerging-technologies-and-products-on-mental-health>)

The deadline for submissions is currently set to 12 September 2022.

.

All submitted articles are peer-reviewed.

Article processing charges are applied to all published articles.

- See if your institution has a payment plan with us. (see here: <https://www.frontiersin.org/about/institutional-membership>)
- Find out about applying for fee support (see here <https://www.frontiersin.org/about/publishing-fees#feesupport>)

Kind regards,

Chao Guo

Topic Editor,

Digital Mental Health Section, Frontiers in Psychiatry

On behalf of the Topic Editors.

Email: chaoguo@pku.edu.cn